I HAVEN'T any idea. THAT I'M going to say. WHAT I want to say. OF STRIKING men. AND PROFITEERS. AND COLUMNS of type. AND ENDLESS words. THAT FOOL themselves. INTO MAKING believe. THAT THOSE who write.
AND THOSE who speak. ARE UNSELFISH men. WITH THE one desire. TO MAKE the world. A BETTER place. FOR THE boy of today. THAT BACK in my brain. IN ALL this mees. THAT IS so mixed up.
THAT I M almost dissy.
JUST SITTING here. AND WONDERING.
THERE COMES in the baze. OF THE things I see. GREAT PUBLIC schools. AND CITEX SUPPLIES. AND SWARMS of kids. ON THEIR May to school. AND HOME again. AND PLAYING games. WHERE THE traffic is. AND COUNTLESS homes, WHERE IF you'd go. YOU WOULD be told THAT THEIR only peace. IS WHEN the kids. ARE AWAY at school.

OR OUT on the street. OR IN their beds. AND I SEE good men. IN PUBLIC halls. WHERE THEY speak to men ON THE public good. AND IF you asked. THEY COULDN'T tell. WHO THEIR boys played with. OR WHERE they played. AND I see myself. AND MAYBE you. IN COMPLACENT mood. AS WE point to the schools. THAT WE have built. AND THE underpaid teachers. THAT WE have hired. AND ARE satisfied. THAT OUR task is done. AND OUT of the haze. THERE COMES a voice. I CAN barely hear. BUT I think it says. THAT WE never can build. IF WE start at the top. AND I think it means. IF WE would have men. OF A righteous sort. WE MUST see to it. THAT WE start with the boy. AND THE voice dies out. BUT THE haze remains. AND I'M still confused. I THANK you.

There is a sign presaging intrigues among women interested in politics. Factional dissensions within the two great parties are foreshadowed.

This is not a favorable sway under which to do business with women, especially with those who seek any position of importance.

As for a coman, as long as a wife is certain that her husband adores her above everything else, she asks nothing more of him, and forgives all things to him. He may beat her and starve her, but if there is warmth in his kinses, she will not even remember her bruises against him. She may have to work her fingers to the bone to support him, but as long as he continues to take an interest in holdir; her hand after her day's work is over, she will still consider herself the most fortunate of her sex.

Certainly the thing that invariably starts a woman on a still hunt for an affinity is the fact that her husband has begun to neglect her, and no longer pays her the little attentions that are the breath of life to the feminine sex. You never hear of a wire who has a devoted, affectionate and admiring husband, who lands in the divorce court. It is only then the Gomestic supply of ove gives out that the wife substitutes the unwholesome and indigestible imported brand of article.

Of course when we speak of rivals and divided affection we have in mind the dark man or the blonde lady of the fortune teller, who is to come in our lives and make trouble for us. In reality the true co-respondent who is responsible for the alternation of affection oftener than any individual, male or remale, is business or acciety.

The man gives the first place in his neart to his business. His wife comes afterward. No woman expects her hubband to be as interested in her ashe is in his occupation, of flatternerself that she can inside as genuine their in his business. His wife comes after the strength of the can be seen to be a substant of flatternerself that she can inside as genuine their in his brant as a five-point rise in stocks would. Yet the man who commits this of upe against love wonders that ove plays him false. If men would only serve love as singly as they do but inexa, fower women would parade the streets in velvet gowns, but there would also be fewer aching hearts hidden inder expensive finery.

Wor en illewise set un false gods sometimen a woman is dazzed by society, or litten by the current reaze, and whenever she doors love publishes her by turning his back woon her. Cund still consider herself the most fortunate of her sex.

Such is the power of love-to win and hold love, but we lose our white maginal soon as our own affections cool off. As long as we love, we are loved. When we cease to love, we lose love.

It is when we set up other golds to worship that Cupid revenges himself upon us, by robbing us of the heart we have won, and that we had foolishly believed that we rouid not lose.

It is one of the little tronies of life that no matter how lukewarm our own affection gets, we expert another's love for us to always: keep at the boiling point. Thus do we raise up our rivals, and out of our own lapses create the frankoagteins that slay our happiness.

What first induces a married man to see the society of another woman to see the society of a

Wait until the girl has her divorce and then look her up. Your letters might enter into the case and it would be of no help to the woman and emharrassing for you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—There is a boy in our high school whom I dearly love. He is dressy and nice-looking, but he is considered tought. He seems to be very popular with the girls. I have tried in many ways to forget him, but it seems impossible. Please advise me. BOHSIE.

Try harder than ever to forget him, and in time you will succeed. This is only a school girl fancy and will not last. If you are cureful of your reputation now you will have the respect of everyone, and when you are a young lady the better class of young mon will be attracted to you. It does not pay to go with a "tough" boy, because your name would be classed with his and your reputation injured.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—De you think
